NORTHERN SETTLERS IN THE SOUTH.—Under the heading of "Let us Have Peace," the Baltimore Sun discusses at length the former relations of the Northern and Southern people, especially the treatment of Northern people settling in the South. Its remarks are based on the discussion had in the U. S. Senate a few days ago on that subject between Mr. Merrimon, of North Carolina, and Mr. Edmunds, of Vermont. The Sun says:

"It is well-known that before the war Northern men settling in the South were kindly and hospitably received by the Southern people. They intermarried in Southern families, and positions in every field of enterprise and ambition were as open to them as to the natives of the soil. The highest political prizes in the hands of the states to be bestowed were distributed without reference to birthplace. Northern men, like Berrien of Georgia, were elected to the United States Senate, or like Johnson of Virginia, chosen Governor over a native Virginian, or like S. S. Prentiss of Mississippi, almost idolized for brilliant genius and chivalric character. The war naturally exasperated the people of the two sections against each other, but the sentiment has been subsiding in the South as rapidly as could be expected, so that we find our neighboring State of Virginia electing since the war a Governor Walker, a native of New York, who was one of the army of invasion, and who has just retired from his high position amid the general plaudits for his official course of the Virginia people. While it may be true enough that carpet-baggers who have gone to the South to devour the substance of the people have been looked on with unfriendly eyes, it is not true that any other class of emigrants, unless in exceptional cases, have been treated with less consideration than they deserve."

KINDERGARTEN EDUCATION.—New discoveries are made daily in the various branches of science, and new phases and modes of teaching are devised from time to time that instruction may be imparted to the mind in the simplest and easiest manner. Those who are in the active scenes and duties of life know that their schools are conducted differently from what they were when they were pupils. But is the development of the child the best for the development of the child? Those who introduced the Kindergarten system and those who favor it think not. Greatly as the plans of instruction have changed during the last twenty-five years, the change is destined to be much greater during the next quarter of a century. The Kindergarten schools receive their pupils from three to seven years of age, during which time they usually receive no book learning. That period of time is now suffered to go to waste, or is worse than wasted, because much is learned that is injurious. It is out our purpose to discuss the merits of the system in this article, but to state that a very interesting meeting was held yesterday afternoon in the room of Friends' Elementary and High School, on Lombard street, where the question was very fully discussed. Some interesting essays were read, and a number of ladies and gentlemen expressed favorable opinions of the new plan of teaching. Several of those present propose to visit a Kindergarten school in Washington next week, to observe the plan pursued there, and the manner of instruction, and report at the meeting on next Wednesday afternoon.—Balt. Gazette.

"A JUDICIAL DILEMMA."—Under this heading the Richmond Whig publishes the brief of a case now pending in the Court of Appeals which attacks the constitutionality of the funding bill. The case has already been argued twice, but the court last week, having become aware of the importance of the points involved, asked for a third argument, which is to take place the last of this month.

The case can be briefly stated. It is that of Higginbotham's executor vs. the Commonwealth. By an act of the Legislature in 1820, the State guaranteed to the stockholders of the James River Company (the old James River Company) fifteen per cent. forever and subsequently the State became owner of the whole property and bound itself to pay said dividend. The suit is brought to recover this dividend, the complainant refusing to fund under the funding act, and contending that that act is unconstitutional, as it is a direct violation of a contract.

This will be an interesting case to the legal profession, as well as to the public at large, for it involves the constitutionality of the funding bill in which the tax-payers on the one hand and the bond-holders on the other hand are deeply and directly interested. In a case heretofore decided by the Court of Appeals the funding bill was declared to be constitutional—Judge Staples only dissenting. The fact that the court has now called for a third argument of the new case shows that it is not satisfied with its decision a year or so ago.—Petersburg News.
